

SCUPPIE

Hair held in perfectly-disheveled-but-just-right place by non-aerosol, all natural mousse--tested on "hair stylists" not animals.

A good looking, reasonably priced, 100% organic cotton shirt--no emblem of reptiles or mallet wielding horsemen.

Credit card that donates a percentage of payments to a tropical rainforest fund.

A stylish, non-disposable fountain pen that uses biodegradable ink made from mashed berries.

Paper-cut sustained while bundling piles of the Wall Street Journal for delivery to the recycling center.

"Baggies"... comfortable and great for that back-to-basics, down-to-earth look.

Reusable canvas shopping bag--filled mainly with organically grown vegetables, tuna fish caught without harm to our friend Flipper, and a package of condoms for the safe enjoyment of life's finer moments.

Satchel containing the profits from a stock portfolio made up of companies that stay in the black by keeping green.

Roller-blades--suitable for exercise as well as non-polluting "rides" to work.

Faithful companion picked-up from the local animal shelter (chosen for its loveable good looks, not its pedigree)
